

Dear FCC Commission,

I am an entertainment industry professional taking time from a busy day to let you know my feelings on the specific issue of "Pappas Telecasting Companies' 'donation' of $325,000 in airtime to Republican candidates."

I am a Republican, but I cannot see how our party is served nor the public interest when the FCC allows a broadcasting company to blatantly abuse its power by giving preferential treatment to one side of the political spectrum. This is more than just a stain on the party to accept such an unfair advantage, but also a huge test for the FCC.

Many from both sides are watching to see if the FCC is still serving the public interest. Your response or lack thereof to this offense will send a strong signal to the nation and will determine whether our airwaves have any chance of serving the interest of the people in the future. Your failure to respond will signal the end of your traditional role as fair mediator for the airwaves and begin your role as salesmen to the highest bidder.

I ask you to please, in the interests of your country and at the request of the citizens you serve to bring Pappas and any other such abuser of its power to answer for their actions against the interests of the viewership.

Sincerely,

Craig Havens
